HS code

The Harmonized System (HS) code is a standardized numerical system used to classify goods traded internationally. The HS code is a six-digit code that was developed by the World Customs Organization (WCO) and is used by over 200 countries to classify goods. It is used by customs officials to determine the tariffs and duties that should be applied to goods being imported or exported.

HS codes are used to classify a wide range of products, from raw materials to finished goods. The system is based on a hierarchical structure, with the first two digits representing the chapter, the next two digits representing the heading, and the final two digits representing the subheading.

The first two digits of the HS code indicate the chapter, which is a broad category that groups together similar products. For example, chapter 09 covers coffee, tea, mate, and spices, while chapter 84 covers nuclear reactors, boilers, machinery, and mechanical appliances.

The next two digits of the HS code represent the heading, which provides more detailed information about the product. For example, heading 09.01 covers coffee, while heading 84.18 covers refrigerators, freezers, and other refrigerating or freezing equipment.

The final two digits of the HS code represent the subheading, which provides even more specific information about the product. For example, subheading 09.01.11 covers roasted coffee, while subheading 84.18.20 covers refrigerated or frozen display cabinets.

HS codes are important for a number of reasons. First, they provide a standardized system for classifying goods, which makes it easier for customs officials to determine the appropriate tariffs and duties. This can help to reduce the risk of errors and ensure that importers and exporters pay the correct amount of taxes.

Second, HS codes are used to collect trade statistics. By tracking the imports and exports of goods using HS codes, governments and organizations can gain valuable insights into global trade patterns and identify areas where trade barriers may exist.

Third, HS codes can be used to monitor compliance with regulations and standards. For example, certain products may be subject to environmental regulations or safety standards, and HS codes can be used to track compliance with these requirements.

HS Code History

Due to the lack of uniformity between the too many different classification systems around the globe that had grown up throughout the world had become a major concern for the trade business. Since that time, several attempts have been made to create an international system of classification that can be used to serve this purpose. On 1988, most of the World Customs Organization WTO members adopted the new Harmonized System HS Code. And it came into effect directly.

What are the applications of HS Codes?

HS code is being used by Countries' Customs authorities, different statistical agencies, market research agencies and many other government bodies, to monitor and control the import and export of various commodities through:

Transport tariffs and statistics

Collection of internal taxes

Monitoring of controlled goods

Customs tariffs

Collection of international trade statistics

Rules of country of origin

Trade negotiations

Risk assessment, information technology and compliance.

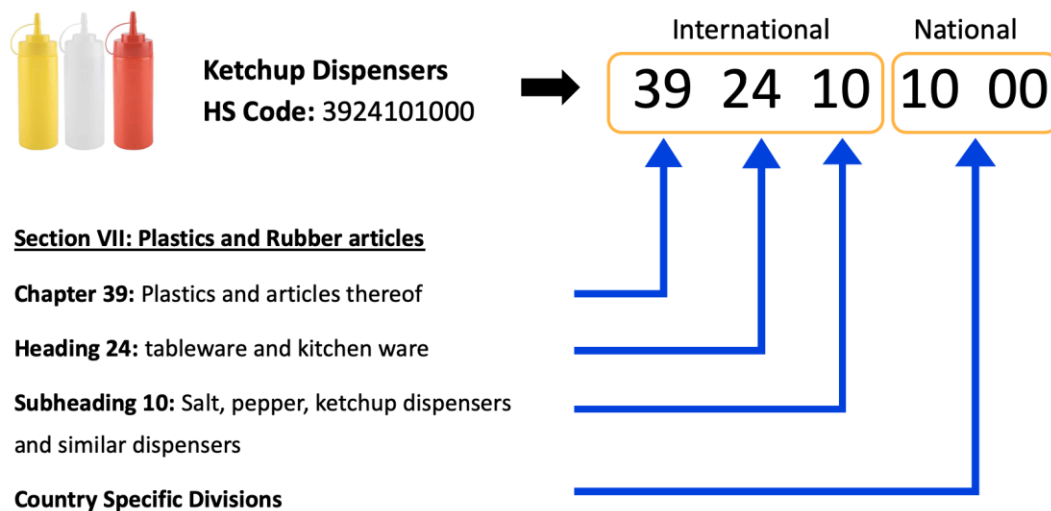

Also, many companies are using HS codes to calculate the total landed cost of imported products as well as identify selling and sourcing opportunities.

Features of HS Code

- HS codes are made as per defined rules that classify the codes.
- It acts as a worldwide uniform standard for classification of goods.
- Almost 5000 commodities of goods traded internationally are covered by HS codes.

HS Code Example

HS Code Example

Structure and classification of HS Code in India

According to WCO, the length of an HS code should be six digits. However, additional digits can be added as per further classification codes of a particular country. For instance, USA uses 10-digit HS code, where the first six digits are given by the WCO (World Customs Organization) and additional numbers are allotted by the US customs authority, called Harmonized Tariff Schedule (HTS) numbers<sup>2</sup>.

In India, an 8-digit HSN code is used, in which the first six digits are given by WCO and two other digits are additional. The HSN codes are further classified into 21 sections, 99 chapters and each chapter defines a specific product category – heading, subheading and tariff item<sup>3</sup>.

So, in the 8-digit ITC (HS) code, the first two digits indicate the chapter, the next two represent the heading, the next two represent subheadings and the last two are the tariff item numbers.

Let's consider this example (only for reference):

The HSN code is 090111112.

09- Tea, Coffee and spices ()

0901- Tea, green tea or blue tea

090111- Green Tea that is not caffeinated

09011112- Green Tea that is not caffeinated grade B

So, 090111 is an international part of the HS code and "12" is added in India. This 8-digit code is known as ITC (HS) code/Indian Trade Classification/ Indian Tariff Code. These ITC (HS) codes are developed and maintained by the Directorate General of Foreign Trade in India.

Importance and uses of HS Code

HS codes are used for:

- Import and export tariff rates, specific to the product category
- Analysis and collection of international trade data
- Calculation of internal taxes and liabilities to be paid

Why HS codes are important for international trade:

Aids in customs clearance: Goods can be sorted and arranged in an overall structure, which helps in smooth customs clearance process.

No more catalog confusion: Product information can be easily interpreted and both the parties

(importer and exporter) can avoid unwanted catalog-based confusion caused during exchange. Keeps a track of tariffs and taxes: These codes are used by customs authorities to apply tariffs and taxes on goods and keep a track of exports and imports.

How to find the right HS code for your product?

You can easily find the ITC (HS) code for your product, so you can export easily.

- a) Open the DGFT website
- b) Search the list provided by the Ministry of Commerce
- c) Once the latest list opens, search for the relevant chapter
- d) Check for correct heading, subheading and tariff item
- e) Get the right HS code for your product.

Consequences of incorrect usage of HS Code

In case a product is classified incorrectly due to improper usage of HS Code, it can lead to border delays, seizure of products, non-compliance penalties or sometimes even denial of import privileges.

HS Code under GST in India

HSN code is required for all import and export trade transactions. However, this code has a set of exceptions too:

1. If turnover is less than INR 1.5 crores, no HSN code is required.
2. If total turnover is between INR 1.5 crores to INR 5 crores, a two-digit HSN code is required
3. If total turnover is more than INR 5 crores, a four- digit HSN code is required.
4. For Import and export trading, an eight-digit HSN code is mandatory.

HS CODE - PEPC

Project Exports encompass both products and services except for Consultancy & Project Construction Items (Project Goods) export category. Since EPC/Turnkey is preferred mode of award of contracts across the globe, the contractor has to procure all products and services at its end.

A large EPC project export such as refinery may have thousands of 8-digit HSN products along with accompanying services. The list of these products and services is growing by the day since project agencies are awarding specialized contracts such as hospitals on EPC basis. This would require the contractor to source and install medical equipment's also as part of a project. Additionally, with advent of smart infrastructure concept electronic hardware and software are increasingly becoming part of Project Exports.

As far as products are concerned Project Exports can encompass products from chapter 25, 32, 38, 39, 40, 44, 68, 69, 70, 72, 73, 74, 76, 79, 80, 81, 82, 84, 85, 86, 87, 89, 90, 94 & 98.

Therefore, instead of an exhaustive list, an indicative list of HSN codes is given below for kind perusal please:
